About the Contributors

Nola Cooke is a Visiting Fellow in the Division of Pacific and Asian History in the Research School of Pacific and Asian History at The Australian National University. She has produced numerous journal articles, book chapters, and conference papers on southern Vietnamese and Cambodian history.

Email: nola.cooke@anu.edu.au

Thomas Engelbert is Professor for Vietnamese Language and Culture at the University of Hamburg, Germany, and author of Die chinesische Mindeheit im Süden Vietnams (Hoa) als Paradigma der kolonialen und nationalistischen Nationalitätenpolitik. [The Chinese Minority in Southern Vietnam (Hoa) as a paradigm of colonial and nationalist ethnic politics] (2002). His research interests include the history of minorities in Vietnam.

Email: jengelbert@web.de

Philip King completed a doctoral dissertation with the History and Politics Program at the University of Wollongong, Australia, in 2005. It is entitled “From periphery to centre: Shaping the history of the Central Malay Peninsula”.

Email: acicisjogja@mn.net.id

Li Tana, who runs the Centre for the Study of the Chinese Southern Diaspora, is a Fellow in the Division of Pacific and Asian History in the Research School of Pacific and Asian History at The Australian National University. She is the author of Nguyễn Cochinchina (1998) and of many works on Vietnamese maritime and economic history.

Email: tana.li@anu.edu.au

Denys Lombard, who died in January 1998, was a distinguished French scholar of Asia who headed the École française d’Extrême-orient from 1993 until his death. His prolific publications include a major three-volume history of Java, Le Carrefour javanais. Essai d’histoire globale (1990) and (with Jean Aubin) Asian Merchants and Businesssmen in the Indian Ocean and the China Sea (2000). The short essay published here was one of his last articles.

Julia Martinez lectures in the Department of History and Politics, and is a research associate at the Centre for Asia-Pacific Social Transformation Studies, at the University of Wollongong, Australia. Her main research interest is in Asian labour in colonial history, about which she has published numerous articles and book chapters, and the Chinese in Vietnam.

Email: juliam@uow.edu.au

Vincent K. Pollard is a political scientist who lectures in the Asian Studies Program at the University of Hawai‘i at Manoa and is associated with the Center for Chinese Studies there. He has written Globalization, Democratization and Asian Leadership: Power Sharing, Foreign Policy and Society in the Philippines and Japan (Ashgate, 2004), as well as many articles and book chapters.

Email: pollard@hawaii.edu

Paul A. Van Dyke is an Assistant Professor of History at the University of Macau, China. He is the author of the recent study, The Canton Trade: Life and Enterprise on the China Coast, 1700-1845, (2005) as well as a large number of articles and book chapters on the history of Chinese maritime trade and traders.
Email: paul_van_dyke@hotmail.com
Geoff Wade is a historian who works in the Asia Research Institute of the National University of Singapore. He is a prolific author and translator, with interests in China–Southeast Asia historical interactions and comparative historiography.
Email: arigpw@nus.edu.sg

Yee-tuan Wong is a doctoral candidate in the Division of Pacific and Asian History in the Research School of Pacific and Asian History at The Australian National University where he is researching the rise and fall of the “big five” Hokkien families who were central to nineteenth-century Penang’s economic life.
Email: yeetuan.wong@anu.edu.au

For the cover art we thank Ren Zhi Min, OCCB International Company, Singapore.

For the cartography we thank Kay Dancey of the ANU Cartography Unit.