

About the Contributors

Kate BAGNALL is a historian and writer based in Canberra, where she is an Honorary Lecturer in the ANU College of Asia and the Pacific. She has published on various aspects of Chinese Australian history and is co-editor, with Sophie Couchman, of Chinese Australians: Politics, Engagement and Resistance (Brill 2015). Much of her research explores the lives of the women, children and families of Australia's early Chinese communities and the transnational connections and qiaoxiang ties of Chinese Australians before 1940. In 2014-15 she received an Australian Academy of the Humanities Travelling Fellowship to undertake fieldwork in southern China for her project 'Transnational Chinese and White Australia'. She is @baibi on Twitter and you can find her blog at www.chineseaustralia.org.

Email: kate.bagnall@gmail.com

Roger CASAS recently completed a PhD at the Australian National University with a project centred on the connections between Buddhist monasticism and masculinity among the Tai Lue in China. He has lived and worked with monastic communities in Sipsong Panna since 2004, and his ongoing research remains focused on the dynamics between the monastic and broader social and economic realms in this region.

Email: roger.casas@gmail.com

Thak CHALOEMTIARANA is retired but retains appointments as Professor of the graduate field of Asian literature, religion and culture, and Southeast Asian Studies at Cornell University. He was Associate Professor of Political Science, Thammasat University (1974-1980); Deputy Spokesman of the Royal Thai Government (1980); Associate Dean and Director of Admissions, College of Arts and Sciences, Cornell University (1985-1998) and Director of the Cornell Southeast Asia Program (1998-2010).

Email: tc17@cornell.edu

Dr Peter CRABB is a Visiting Fellow in the Fenner School of Environment and Society, Australian National University. He is a geographer by profession, though he always believed that geography and history cannot really be separated. In retirement, his work is largely historical, including an analysis of what might have been the contribution of the Inter-State Commission to the management of Australia's inter-jurisdictional water resources. He is also undertaking the research for a biography of Charles de Boos, the nineteenth century newspaper reporter, novelist, and New South Wales mining warden, a man who was ahead of his times in so many ways.

Email: peter_crabb@bigond.com

Nicholas FARRELLY is a Fellow at the Bell School of Asia Pacific Affairs, ANU as well as Director, ANU Myanmar Research Centre. His research stretches across the Southeast Asian region and focuses on relationships between government control, spatial organisation and political conflict. He has examined these themes across the borderlands where Myanmar rubs against India, Bangladesh and China. He has also continued to research, write and lecture about Thailand. He was a co-founder of New Mandala, a website which focuses on mainland Southeast Asia, and also writes a weekly column for The Myanmar Times.

Email: nicholas.farrelly@anu.edu.au

About the Contributors

Peter GIBSON is a Ph.D. candidate in history at the University of Wollongong. His research centres on the little-known Chinese-Australian furniture industry and its role as a medium of encounter and exchange between Chinese and European Australians. Peter's M.A. thesis, completed in 2014, was on the history of Chinese people in Wollongong.

Email: pccg33@uowmail.edu.au

LIANG Mao-chun is an Associate Professor at the Academy of Overseas Chinese Studies, Jinan University, Guangzhou, China. His main fields of research are trans-national groups across the China-Vietnam interface and Overseas Chinese.

Email: liangmaochun@163.com

Dr Barry McGOWAN is a Canberra-based heritage consultant and historian and a Research Associate at the College of Asia and the Pacific at the Australian National University. He has undertaken many mining heritage surveys and has written extensively on the history and heritage of Australian and Chinese mining technology and Australian and Chinese mining communities. His best known books are Ghost Towns of Australia, and Fool's Gold. Myths and legends of gold-seeking in Australia.

He has also written several thematic histories of the Chinese people in regional and rural Australia. His best-known work is Tracking the Dragon. A history of the Chinese in the Riverina, published jointly by the Museum of the Riverina, Wagga Wagga and the Powerhouse Museum, Sydney in 2010. He is currently working on a thematic history of the Chinese people in Central New South Wales. In October 2015 his most recent publication, Tracking the Dragon: Thematic History of the Chinese people in the Rutherglen/Wahgunyah region of the Indigo Shire, Victoria, was short-listed and commended in the 2015 Victorian Community History Awards.

Email: barry.mcgowan@bigpond.com

Micah F. MORTON is a visiting assistant professor of anthropology at Le Moyne College in Syracuse, NY, USA. He completed his Ph.D. in 2015 at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. His research interests include ethnicity, religion, neo-traditionalism, indigeneity and transnationalism. His doctoral research examined the post-1980s efforts of certain members of the transnational Akha minority to promote a pan-ethnic identity of a profoundly religious and yet modern nature among their roughly 730,000 members residing in north Thailand, east Myanmar/Burma, southwest China, northwest Laos and northwest Vietnam. At present, he continues to follow developments within this pan-Akha identity movement. He has also been studying the post-2000 growth of a national level Indigenous peoples' movement in Thailand on the part of a growing coalition of long oppressed minorities from various parts of the country.

Email: morton.micah@gmail.com

Stephanie OLINGA-SHANNON is the Research and Evaluation Officer at the Association for Survivors of Torture and Trauma (ASeTTS) in Perth, Western Australia. She has previously worked in native title research and aid and development policy. Stephanie studied Chinese language at Tsinghua University in Beijing. Her research interests include forced and voluntary migration, state-minority relations, and relations between majority and minority populations in multi-ethnic societies, in particular the ethnic Chinese in Myanmar.

Email: stephanie.olingashannon@gmail.com

About the Contributors

Geoff WADE is a historian with interests in Sino-Southeast Asian interactions and comparative historiography. Key publications include: Southeast Asia in the Ming Shi-lu: An Open Access Resource (2005) <http://epress.nus.edu.sg/msl/>; China and Southeast Asia (6 vols.) (2009); Southeast Asia in the Fifteenth Century: The China Factor (ed. with Sun Laichen) (2010); Anthony Reid and the Study of the Southeast Asian Past (ed. with Li Tana) (2012); and Asian Expansions: the Historical Experiences of Polity Expansion in Asia (2015). He is currently engaged in researching aspects of contemporary Sino-Australian interactions.

Email: u4892384@anu.edu.au

Diana WONG is an independent researcher residing in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. She has previously held academic positions in Germany, Singapore and Malaysia. Her work as a sociologist has been focused in the recent past on migration and religion. Her current research interest is on Muslim mobilities in Islamic transnational space, as well as on contemporary Chinese migration.

Email: dwongingboh@gmail.com

ZHANG Zhenjiang (张振江) is currently a full Professor of International Relations and the Dean of School of International Studies/Academy of Overseas Chinese Studies, Jinan University, Guangzhou, China. He is also the Director of the Center for Transnational Migration Studies in the university. In 2013, he was chosen to be supported by the “Program for New Century Excellent Talents” by the Ministry of Education of the People’s Republic of China. He is a member of the National Guidance Committee on Teaching Political Science in Colleges and Universities under the Ministry of Education of the People’s Republic of China (2013-2017), the Vice Chairman for China Southeast Asian Studies Association, the Vice Chairman of the Guangzhou Association for Political Studies, and Steering Committee Member of Chinese in Africa/Africans in China Research Network (CA/AC). Professor Zhang’s research interests cover the history and theory of international relations, American foreign policy, international relations in Asia-Pacific, transnational migration, and Southeast Asian studies. He has published extensively in both Chinese and English academic Journals in China and abroad. He also writes short commentaries in newspaper including Yangcheng Evening Post, and Times Weekly.

Email: zhangzhenjiang@gmail.com